A False Charge.

The case of the State vs. Gus. Rintelman instigated by a man named Garner, who claimed to have been robbed by the defendant, was brought up before Justice Zinn yesterday. The case was dismissed by the county attorney after the evidence for the state was introduced and before Mr. Rintelman introduced any testimony in his defense. The evidence showed that the charges were false and entirely removed any stigma which might have been cast upon the defendant by the serious charges made against him.

Mr. Rintelman says he will prosecute Garner on the charge of perjury and is very indignant at the charge being preferred against him without any foundation in fact.

Get your tickets during the day.
The great operatic event of the season.

The orchestra is under the direction of Sig. Tomas.
The demand for tickets continued until 9 o'clock last night.

The Emma Abbott company is composed of fifty-four members.
The opportunity of hearing the most popular American prima donna to-night.

Orders for tickets by telephone receive the same attention as if applied for in person.
Sig. Tagliapietra, "Handsome Tag," as he is sometimes called, is said to receive $200 a week.

There will be one of the most fashionable and cultured audiences of the season at the opera to-night.

The Emma Abbott Opera company will not be able to reach its next season on account of foreign engagements.

The Missouri Pacific railway has made special arrangements to bring Emma Abbott and company from Waco to-day.

Two of the private boxes are still vacant for to-night. Here is a chance for some of the cattle kings to display themselves.

Reserved seats will be sold all day until 7 o'clock to-night, without extra charge. After that hour admission tickets will be sold.

"It is simple justice to the Abbott troupe of the present season to say that there have been many Italian companies here with high-sounding names and still more high-sounding prices which were not able to give nearly so well-balanced performance as this," is what the Chicago News said.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals will be received by me up to 10 o'clock a. m. Saturday for the removal of all refuse and debris from the ruins of my building, corner Flat and Throckmorton streets. I reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

WEDDING BELLS.

Smith-Lodde.

You are requested to attend the marriage ceremony of Albert F. Lodde and Cora B. Smith, at the residence of Mayor J. P. Smith, Fort Worth, Tex., Wednesday, February 25, 1915, at 8:30 o'clock, p. m.

In answer to the above invitation, a very small circle of intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties assembled at the residence of Mayor J. P. Smith last night and witnessed the nuptials of Miss Cora B. Smith, daughter of Dr. H. G. Smith and a niece of Mayor Smith, and Mr. Albert F. Lodde, a young and popular T. & P. Ry. official, with headquarters in this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Johnson of the Christian church.

At 8:30 o'clock the invited guests had arrived, and the elegant parlors of the Smith mansion were bathed in a flood of light when the bride and groom entered the rear parlor arm in arm, followed by two lovely little girls, May Tully, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Tully, and Florence Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Col. J. P. Smith. Mrs. G. T. Potter was at the piano, and as the solemn music of the Wedding March sounded through the rooms the happy couple paused under the front chandelier and in a few moments they were made man and wife.

The scene was a lovely one. The fair bride was arrayed in a wonderfully beautiful white ottoman silk, with lace shoulder-cape, with profuse trimming of white beads over cape and skirt, which glittered in the gas-light with marvelous effect. Her hair was simply arranged and her only ornaments were flowers. With her clear and beautiful complexion heightened by the excitement, she was as lovely as a vision from Paradise. The two little bridesmaids at her side and an infant which played in the light at her feet seemed like spotless spirits attending her on the last night of her girlhood. The groom was as all-grooms are—handsome and happy, but no one notices the groom at a wedding.

After the ceremony and congratulations were over, the bride, leaning on the arm of Col. Smith, led the way to the dining-room, followed by the groom and Mrs. Col. Smith and the guests, where an elegant table of refreshments was awaiting them. The bride cut the huge wedding cake, and amidst the music of human voices, the first hour of the wedded life of the happy couple was spent, while all "went merry as a mar lace bell."

Among the guests were Mrs. Goodenough, Miss Carraway, Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Potter, Col. Morgan Jones, Mr. Sam Smith, Mr. Robert Smith and a number of the relatives of the bride. THE GAZETTE tenders its congratulations to the young couple, and trusts that their wedded life, so auspiciously begun, may be a perpetual summer to them, in which the roses are so full and varied that the thorns will never be seen.
